EDAC, a leader in the design and global production of interconnect products, consistently monitors industry trends that could influence our operations and customer relationships. We are aware of the environmental concerns related to mercury restrictions and their potential impacts.

To address these concerns, EDAC has thoroughly examined the components and materials we use and acquire from external suppliers. Our review indicates that mercury is not currently present in any of the materials used in our parts, their final composition, or our manufacturing processes.

For complete material disclosures, you can request them through EDAC customer service at support@edac.net.
